Special Issue

Research on the Phenomenology of, and Interventions for, Restricted and Repetitive Behaviors in Autism Spectrum Disorder: Clinical and Educational Implications

Guest Editor: Olive Healy, PhD, BCBA-D

Planned Date of Publication: February 2018

The Journal of Developmental and Physical Disabilities is planning a Special Issue for publication in February 2018 on research relating to the phenomenology of, and interventions for, restricted and repetitive behaviors in autism spectrum disorder (ASD).

Manuscripts are invited that address the current scientific and methodological developments on impact, assessment, and/or treatment of restricted and repetitive behaviors in an ASD population. Systematic reviews of research involving intervention effects of empirically supported interventions are also welcome.

Interested authors may submit papers online at:
https://www.editorialmanager.com/jodd/
Deadline for manuscript submission: July 31 2017

Please follow the guidelines for submitting manuscripts found on the journal website. Manuscripts should be prepared according to the 6th edition of the APA Publication Manual. Please remember to indicate on the cover letter that you wish to have your manuscript considered for this Special Issue. Enquiries about the special issue should be addressed to Olive Healy at: olive.healy@tcd.ie.