An Investigation of Women’s and Men’s Perceptions and Meanings Associated with Food Risks

Concern about food risks is widespread. Consumers, however, are found to differ in terms of how they evaluate these risks. One of the most prominent findings in this regard is the differences between women and men. Many studies report that men are less worried about environmental and technological risks than women, which is also the case for food risks. At the same time it is criti cized that these differences are often exaggerated, similarities overlooked, and systematic investigations are lacking. Andrea Bieberstein gives a comprehensive overview of theoretical approaches to risk perception and empirical work that has been conducted in the field of risk perception research. Furthermore, she provides a systematic investigation of how food risks are constructed for women and men by uncovering the meanings in terms of associations, feelings, and values that they attach to various food risks. This allows a deeper understanding of the gender differences in risk perception in terms of their relevance and meaning.

Historical Archeology of Tourism in Yellowstone National Park

This volume contains three studies that trace the history of tourism in Yellowstone National Park through material remains discovered in both terrestrial and underwater archeological sites. A research approach with an archeological foundation opens new avenues of inquiry not available by using historical documents alone. Incorporating archeological materials into our interpretations of historical tourism in Yellowstone can help counter research biases that hamper use of a sometimes-fragmentary archival record. Archeology gives voice to people otherwise missing from written history, and therefore give us the broadest view of the past. These chapters draw together the fascinating historical archeology of Yellowstone National Park into a single volume linked by a common research framework, the archeology of tourism. While oftentimes treated as separate and unrelated resources, historical archeological sites on land, underwater, and in the liminal zone in between, connect in Yellowstone through a shared history and a universal purpose. Situating these sites within the context of a larger tourist infrastructure allows us to broaden our interpretation and enriches the stories the sites have to tell.

An Archaeology of Plantation Life in Nineteenth Century Zanzibar

Capitalism and Cloves
Within the well-established field of historical archaeology of plantations, this work is unique in focusing on a plantation outside of the Americas. In nineteenth century Zanzibar, clove plantations were established by Omani Arab colonial rulers of the East African coast. This work will explore themes of: capitalism, colonialism, plantation agriculture, African diaspora communities, gender identities, as well as Islamic studies.

Features
► Provides new insight into colonialism in a non-Western setting ► Detailed case study presented in larger theoretical framework ► Explores common historical archaeological themes in a new context

Preventing Terrorism and Controlling Risk
A Comparative Analysis of Control Orders in the UK and Australia

This Brief takes a provocative look at existing socio-legal literature with a comparative study of terrorism control orders, focusing on how the concept of pre-emption fits within a traditional criminological framework. This timely work examines how such measures might be conceived and interpreted within a situational crime prevention approach. Over the past decade, socio-legal scholars have identified a rise in pre-emptive control mechanisms to respond to terrorism and other threats in the post-9/11 world. Many have argued that this pre-emptive rationale has been used to justify the introduction of measures that transcend established legal and risk frameworks, to deal with individuals or groups thought to pose a threat to the state or its citizens.

Features
► Examines a shift towards pre-emptive crime prevention after 9/11 ► Draws parallels between British and Australian control order mechanisms and situational crime prevention techniques ► Analyzes the application of crime risk assessment techniques and their implications

China-Russia Relations in Central Asia

Energy Policy, Beijing’s New Assertiveness and 21st Century Geopolitics

As China rises to global power status, its relations with other major powers, including Russia, are constantly renegotiated. Energy figures prominently in both countries’ foreign policy. An extensive analysis of Chinese language sources – academic debate 1997-2012 – confirms a collision of interests over Central Asian reserves. While unanimous appeals to compromise render previous predictions of impending confrontation unconvincing, descriptions of Sino-Central Asian energy relations as “central to energy security”, and the explicit rejection of a Russian “sphere of influence”, also exclude a retreat. In the long term, China will likely replace Russia as the dominant force in Central Asia’s energy sector, causing the Kremlin to perceive another “encroachment.” The current notion of a “strategic partnership” will inevitably be challenged.

Well-Being, Resilience and Quality of Life from Children’s Perspectives

A Contextualized Approach

This book explores the broad view on child well-being and the quality of life research. It starts with a discussion of the origin of the social indicator movement and a review of literature on the concepts of quality of life, (subjective) well-being and resilience. It then discusses the force of culture on child development, and shows how two prototypical environments favor either the independent or interdependent self-model.

Features

► Covers an important issue and offers an innovative view on child well-being ► Makes clear how a disaster like the Tsunami in 2004 poses completely different questions
► Shows that concepts such as resilience, well-being and quality of life can only be understood against the social and ecological context of the children and caregivers concerned

Evidence-Based Practice in Juvenile Justice
Progress, Challenges, and Opportunities

Over the past 15 years, evidence-based practice in juvenile justice has moved from a concept to a full blown practice in a number of states. They have used research based principles and programs to: - completely reorganize their system for treating juveniles - reduce crime and recidivism - and saved money in the process. Evidence-Based Practice in Juvenile Justice describes the major players in this transformative process, the particular role they play in moving research to practice, and provides recommendations for applying this research in other locations. It will be of key interest to researchers in Criminology and Criminal Justice with a focus on Juvenile Justice or Juvenile Delinquency, or related fields such as Public Policy and Social Work, as well as policy-makers, and practitioners working in the juvenile justice system.

High-level Political Appointments in the Philippines
Patronage, Emotion and Democracy

This book questions the belief that patronage explains poor governance and weak organizations. Its focus is on high-level political appointees in the Philippines, but its implications for development processes and policy are far-reaching. Patronage stimulates the emergence of democracy and welfare, and constitutes formal organizations. So intimately connected is it with the health of democracy and effective organizations that attempts to eradicate patronage only harm social, organizational and democratic life.

Features
► Provides a novel and challenging understanding of patronage and its role in democracy, development, and effective organizations ► Offers a new understanding of ‘developed’ and ‘developing’ societies ► Presents empirical information on a key feature of Philippines’ government - the selection of high-level civil servants and political appointees ► Based on interviews with high-level political appointees

Effective Interventions in the Lives of Criminal Offenders

This book provides the most current thinking on effective interventions in the lives of criminal offenders. Original articles by leading criminologists provide in-depth analyses of “turning points” in the desistance process experienced by criminal offenders. An understanding of the sources of turning points (or interventions) across the life course is vital to assessing their impact on criminal behavior.

Features
▶ Provides a theoretical framework for understanding effective interventions in the lives of criminal offenders
▶ Examines recent innovations in effective intervention strategies
▶ Studies the long-term effects of marriage in the lives of criminal offenders

 Trafficking in Women

Local Perspectives with Global Implications

In this book, the author examines human trafficking for sexual exploitation from a combined global and local perspective. The author explores global patterns of trafficking, and then compares them with detailed field work on the local level in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The author draws comparisons between Bosnia and Herzegovina, the United States, and Turkey, as destination countries for trafficking. This innovative work not only synthesises literature on trafficking, but also provides novel approach to theorising and studying trafficking, which will be of interest to scholars and officials working in the areas of crime and justice, migration, gender studies, as well as social policy and economics.

Features
▶ Combines global-level theory with local case studies
▶ New methodological approach to studying Human Trafficking Interdisciplinary approach, covering social, political, and legal aspects of human trafficking

Contents
Introduction: Macro And Micro Perspectives Of Trafficking.- What is Human Trafficking and How Widespread is It?.- Dynamics Of Human Trafficking.- How and Why Does Trafficking Happen.- Understanding Trafficking On A Local Level.- Researching Trafficking Globally.- Researching Trafficking On A Global Level.- Conclusion: The Benefit Of Dual Approach To Understanding Trafficking

An Archaeology of Australia Since 1788

This volume provides an important new synthesis of archaeological work carried out in Australia on the post-contact period. It draws on dozens of case studies from a wide geographical and temporal span to explore the daily life of Australians in settings such as convict stations, goldfields, whalers’ camps, farms, pastoral estates and urban neighbourhoods. The different conditions experienced by various groups of people are described in detail, including rich and poor, convicts and their superiors, Aboriginal people, women, children, and migrant groups. The social themes of gender, class, ethnicity, status and identity inform every chapter, demonstrating that these are vital parts of human experience, and cannot be separated from archaeologies of industry, urbanization and culture contact.

Features
- The first volume in 10 years to cover the whole of Australian historical archaeology
- Co-written by the president of the Australasian Society for Historical Archaeological (ASHA)
- Written with an eye for the graduate level course in historical archaeology and maritime archaeology

Features
- Provides a holistic system analysis to examine drug distribution criminal careers of gang members and non-gang members
- Demonstrates the social and environmental factors leading to gang entry and retention

Understanding Theology and Homosexuality in African-American Communities

Understanding Theology and Homosexuality in African-American Communities focuses specifically on helping mental professionals understand the scriptural and historical bases for the negative stance of some African American churches towards same-sex relations, and how that understanding is relevant within the context of mental health care. It provides a summary of the relevant professional literature and examples from clinical practice and/or research. This Brief is a basic reference for social workers, psychologists, counselors and other mental health professionals engaged in direct practice with African American clients and families.

Features
- Reviews the existing literature of theology, history, and related mental health fields
- Provides examples from clinical practice and research studies
- Examines the issues at the level of the client, relationship, and community

Risk and Resilience in Military and Veteran Families

This book series focuses on military and veteran families, and the challenges and opportunities they face in relation to military service, particularly during and after war. Periodically, books in this series come out of the Military Families Research Institute International Symposia on Research on Military and Veteran Families, featuring attention to issues related to four topics: functioning in intimate relationships; parenting and child outcomes; family sequelae of wounds and injuries; and single service members. Other books in the series focus in depth on a particular aspect of family life or a particular group of families in the military or veteran population. All volumes include material related to both research and training, and material from scholars from multiple disciplines and countries.

The Paleoanthropology and Archaeology of Big-Game Hunting

Protein, Fat, or Politics?

Since its inception, paleoanthropology has been closely wedded to the idea that big-game hunting by our hominin ancestors arose, first and foremost, as a means for acquiring energy and vital nutrients. This assumption has rarely been questioned, and seems intuitively obvious – meat is a nutrient-rich food with the ideal array of amino acids, and big animals provide meat in large, convenient packages.

Features

- Comprehensive, multifaceted explanation of human nutrition and evolutionary needs
- Synthesizes increasing number of arguments against the prevailing theories of big-game hunting
- Provides a new explanation for a human adaptations

Methodological Cognitivism

Vol. 2: Cognition, Science, and Innovation

This book covers a broad spectrum of topics, from experimental philosophy and cognitive theory of science, to social epistemology and research and innovation policy. Following up on the previously published Volume 1, “Mind, Rationality, and Society,” it provides further applications of methodological cognitivism in areas such as scientific discovery, technology transfer and innovation policy. It also analyzes the impact of cognitive science on philosophical problems like causality and truth. The book is divided into four parts: Part I “Experimental Philosophy and Causality” tackles the problem of causality, which is often seen as straddling metaphysics, ontology and epistemology. Part II “Cognitive Rationality of Science” deals with the cognitive foundation of scientific rationality, starting from a strong critique of the neopositivist rationality of science on the one hand and of the relativist and social reduction of the methodology of science on the other. Part III “Research Policy and Social Epistemology” deals with topics of social epistemology, science policy and culture of innovation.
